COMFORT FOR LAGER BEER DRINKERS.—Lager beer is healthy, the physicians say so; and more, it has been so proved. In one of the lager beer manufactories, near New York, says the Day Book, about sunset, a week or two since, a gentleman who is very fond of the article, indulged himself with a look through the premises and came upon a large vat, in which he found the proprietor enjoying a bath. "For heaven's sake, sir, what are you doing in there?" said the visitor. "I ish makin' mineself vell," said the bather. They throng in droves from the country, towns, and places, to the larger aglomerations of humanity as if they were certain to find assylums and relief among the many. This is a sad error. In times like the present, the poor and the unemployed should scatter from the large cities through the country. The chances of obtaining some employment are far greater. There

FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOV. 25TH, 1857.

We have nothing new to notice on our remarks of last

We have to report only one or two small transactions at 11} cents for middling to good and the bank rates have been further advanced to 10 per middling. The market at present is unsettled and our quotations must be looked upon as merely nominal, as buyers do not appear disposed to operate. See table.
